

N.C. Drug Education Schools 2004-2005

The N. C. Drug Education Schools provide a statewide system of schools empowered through N.C. General Statute to operate as an alternative to jail for persons with simple drug offenses. The goal is that as a result of completing the school, the student will be able to identify a personal plan reflective of an informed self-assessment, resulting in the elimination, avoidance and/or reduction of substance usage and related consequences, including recidivism. There is standardized information collected with each student who enters a drug education school, and this year we have increased capacity to track additional factors in our aggregate data. This report reflects findings from this information obtained during the fiscal year 2004-2005 from the 2687 students recorded as enrolled in the state's Drug Education Schools. Key findings from the data are highlighted here for consideration in learning, growing, improving, and planning related to Drug Education Schools.
